This Week in Wabash

Hello, Wabash,

Happy Friday. Happy fall. Happy almost Halloween.

I'll keep this newsletter short as it will be my last as Editor of the Wabash Plain Dealer. I've accepted a new job which I'm really excited about. However, before I go, I wanted to say thank you to you, my readers.

Before I started here in June 2019, I had never so much as visited Wabash County. Now, after having worked here for over three years, I can truly say you truly have something special. I am grateful I've had such a wonderful community to cover during my time here.

To everyone who read my work during my time here, even if you hated it, I wanted you to know I truly appreciate it.

As of this writing, I do not know who the new Editor will be, though you can apply for the job here if you want.

Whoever it ends up being, I hope you will show them the same amount of hospitality you've shown me during my time here.

If you have something you'd like to be considered for publication in the Wabash Plain Dealer going forward, please contact Chronicle-Tribune Executive Editor Jared Keever at:

If you still can't get enough of me, I also have a podcast, The Rob Burgess Show. It's a weekly interview show I've been doing since 2016. There are over 200 episodes and past guests have included Pulitzer Prize winners and New York Times-bestselling authors:

Before I go, I have one last favor to ask. Please support local journalism. It is so important right now. In a time when false information is rampant and news deserts are growing by the day, the Wabash Plain Dealer has been here since 1859 shining a light on Wabash County. Don't take this for granted. It has been an honor having my turn upholding this legacy. I'm asking you to do your part in keeping it alive going forward.

Well, that's all I have for today. Have a great rest of your day.

Best,

Rob
